

Announcing the New AAWC CEO

The Board of Directors is pleased to introduce its Chief Executive Officer. Join us in welcoming Victoria E. Elliott, RPh, MBA, CAE to the Association.

After careful consideration of over 100 applicants, Victoria was selected as the AAWC CEO. She brings a wealth of experience in association management, organizational planning and fundraising. Most recently, she was Director of Development at the University of the Sciences. As a Certified Association Executive (CAE), Victoria's qualifications include alliance building, membership growth, volunteer engagement and leadership development. She served as Executive Director for the American Neurological Association, Dermatology Nurses' Association, Attention Deficit Disorder Association, Society For Biomaterials and the Pennsylvania Society of Health System Pharmacists.

Ms. Elliott earned her BS in Pharmacy at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, now part of the University of the Sciences, and an MBA in Health and Medical Services Administration at Widener University. Her pharmacy career was spent largely in hospital practice where she specialized in pediatrics and hospital pharmacy administration. Ms. Elliott is a member of the American Society of Association Executives, the organization that confers the certification in association management (CAE), and a past president of the Mid-Atlantic Society of Association Executives where she remains an active member.

The AAWC looks towards the future under Victoria's leadership.
